4. REPORT OF FINDINGS

On 7 February 1975, [redacted], CW2, [redacted] Student, 63rd Company, 6th Battalion, Aviation Troop Brigade, US Army Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Alabama, was interviewed in the Fort Rucker Resident Office, 902d Military Intelligence Group, Building 616, Fort Rucker. [redacted] a resident of [redacted] volunteered the following information:

During the period, June 1973 until November 1974, [redacted] was assigned to the 70th Aviation Detachment, Bangkok, Thailand. From June 1973 until June 1974, "Over The Fence" flights originating at the 70th Aviation Detachment were flown only to Phnom Penh on an infrequent basis. From June 1974 thru November 1974, 70th Aviation Detachment flights were scheduled on a daily basis to Phnom Penh, Banteay Meanchey, and Battambang, Cambodia. These flights were in support of MEDTC (actual identity unknown to [redacted]) DTL, which [redacted] believed meant Defense Logistics, and OICC (actual identity unknown to Source). MEDTC was composed of US Army personnel wearing civilian clothes, whose office was located in the US Embassy, Phnom Penh, and had a mission of ensuring that US military aid arriving in Cambodia was actually received by Cambodia Ground Forces. DTL's headquarters in Bangkok, Thailand, was comprised of American civilian and military personnel who provided logistical and maintenance support to the Cambodian Air and Ground Forces. OICC was composed of civilian and military personnel, however, the military always wore civilian attire. Source knew nothing of these organizations mission, or their exact location. The purpose of the flights in support of these organizations was to transport American civilian and military personnel, administrative paperwork, and food supplies to American personnel located primarily in the locations mentioned previously. He believed that all flights were approved by the parent organization to the 70th Aviation Detachment (AD) which Smith thought was the Military Assistance Command Thailand (MACT), located in Samnasan, Thailand, which was adjacent to the U-Tapao US Air Force Base, Thailand. 70th AD pilots who flew these "Over The Fence" missions were not provided before mission briefings or after mission debriefings, intelligence briefings regarding hostile positions, AAA sites, or what action to take should the aircraft be downed, precisely what the pilots status was as US Army aviators in military uniforms, flying Army aircraft with routine markings, overflying hostile combat areas, or information regarding the pilots status while on the ground. Pilots were required to change to civilian attire immediately upon deplaning at point of arrival, and to remain in civilian clothes until they reported back to the airfield for takeoff. This caused the pilots to question exactly what their status would be if questioned, apprehended, or captured by hostile ground forces while dressed in civilian attire. [redacted] queried various friendly intelligence sources and agencies located in Bangkok, and discovered that not one of these agencies of individuals had prior knowledge of "Over The Fence" flights conducted by the 70th AD.

[ ] had no desire to release any information possessed by him to anyone except Military Intelligence personnel. [ ] was willing to submit a sworn statement; to have his information released with his identity revealed; and to appear before any proceeding concerning these matters.
